

NATIONAL PUBLIC HEALTH WEEK

Everyone deserves the opportunity to live a long, healthy life free from preventable disease and injury. Across the country, public health workers ensure the basic foundations necessary for good health — clean water, safe food, breathable air and access to lifesaving vaccines, just to name a few. But to truly become the healthiest nation by 2030, we must achieve health equity. This means taking on the social determinants of health that put good health and longevity out of reach for so many in America.

During the first full week of April each year, APHA brings together communities to observe National Public Health Week. This national campaign recognizes public health's importance and educates the public, policymakers and practitioners about public health issues. Find resources to raise awareness about public health and prevention at www.nphw.org.

Save the date:

National Public Health Week is April 1-7, 2019

AN INITIATIVE OF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Get involved with National Public Health Week!

Join a growing movement to create the healthiest nation in one generation. We celebrate the power of prevention, advocate for healthy and fair policies, share strategies for successful partnerships and champion the role of a strong public health system.

- Sign up as an NPHW partner at www.nphw.org and link to our site.
- Organize, promote and attend NPHW events in your community. We have promotional and educational materials for you.
- Follow us on Twitter at twitter.com/nphw.
- Join the 1 Billion Steps Challenge and get moving with your community at www.nphw.org/get-involved/steps-challenge.

The American Public Health Association champions the health of all people and all communities. We are the only organization that influences federal policy, has a nearly 150-year perspective and brings together members from all fields of public health. Learn more at www.apha.org.

AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION
For science. For action. For health.